ROUND-UPS.

There will be Plenty of Hogs in Texas for the Packing House.

A Few Good Points for Feeders of Cattle and Sheep—Shipments Stacking up—General Stock Notes.

"I don't think there will be any difficulty experienced by the packing house people in getting hogs from Texas, to run their packing house on," said a well posted stockman to a GAZETTE reporter yesterday. "The question of raising hogs has been so well discussed, and the profits of the business so well shown up by THE GAZETTE and other papers in the state, that farmers in all sections have turned their attention to the business, and there are now in Texas two, and perhaps three hogs to where there was one two years ago."

"How about feed for them?" "Plenty of it. Corn will be a little high, no doubt, on account of the failure of the crop in other states but Texas has an abundance of corn. All over the southwestern central and northern parts of the state the season has been comparatively good and there are lots of corn fields that will yield thirty-five bushels per acre. And even if this was not so, the better part is abundant. The potatoes and the shinnocks are loaded with acorns in all parts of the state, and the pecan crop, the finest sweet mast that ever grew, is good."

"What quality of hogs can be had in Texas?" "The quality, generally is not as high as in some other states, a great many low grade hogs being raised in the eastern part of the state; but all over the prairie country the grade of hogs has been greatly improved and the Berkshire and Poland China are in the majority. I am glad, aye more than glad to see that this packing house is going to start up. It will not only furnish a market for all the hogs in the state but it will stimulate an industry that is yet in its infancy, as it will be but a few years until Texas will have more fine hogs than any state in the Union. The profits in hog raising, especially in Texas where hog cholera rarely appears—where climatic conditions are all in favor of it—can be made the most profitable business for the farmer or the stockman that there is in the state. It will beat out raising and cotton culture all hollow and it is going to become decidedly prominent in a few years."

FEEDING.

A Few Suggestions that Stockmen Should Consider Well.

The Field and Farm, one of the best stock and agricultural papers in the West, lays down a few rules that would be of no disadvantage to stockmen and feeders if they would consider them. It says:

"The time now approaches when feeding cattle and sheep for the shambles will begin. It should begin while the weather is yet warm and the animals from the grass range are in a thriving condition. More flesh can be put on and with less feed in October than in December or January. The colder the weather the slower will be the thrift. Successful feeding either of sheep or cattle for the shambles is a science not always understood. There is more of it than the plain work of pitching out hay and grain. The study must be to know when, where and how much to feed. The under-fed steer will refuse to thrive and so will the over-fed. The feeder who cannot tell when the animal has had enough or when it has had too much will never make a successful feeder. One of the most successful cattle feeders we ever knew was a blind man who depended wholly upon his sense of touch and feeling to judge when to increase or diminish their rations. When the animals were too wild to be handled he just told their condition by his sense of smell."

Cattle to do well in our mild climate need not be confined in stall or stanchion but may be allowed the liberty of the yard, provided the yard is not too big and there is good shelter from north and west winds. Too much latitude in which to travel will be as detrimental as too little. When first confined the animal will be uneasy, but as soon as he begins laying on flesh he will become lazy and lay down and grow when his stomach is full and there is nothing to excite him. And to this end he had better be dehorned and live in harmony with his fellow cattle. A dehorned steer will fatten on a third less corn than will a steer with his fighting appendages on and duly sharpened.

We should never undertake to make beef or mutton on hay alone. It is far better that some grain should be used. Our alfalfa hay is the best rough feed in the world, and yet it will be found profitable to assist it with grain. The grain should never be given until ground. The New England farmer gave nearly always $1 a hundred for his corn, and then he gave straight to the grist mill and pays a toll of a seventh or eighth to get it ground. He cuts hay and wets it, and mixes the two for horses and cattle, particularly for his milch cows. He has learned from long experience that he cannot feed corn. It will not pay him. We feed corn and he just tells him to pick up the waste. That would do if there was no better way. But there is. We riot in rich land, cheap hay and careless ways. We shall soon learn to economize in feeding, especially in winter, with cut hay, ground grain and moderately warm water. Colorado can make beef and compete successfully with the world. But feeding must first be learned.

A Good Team.

With such men as ex-Congressman Ben LeFevre of Xenia, Ohio, whose record on the appropriation committee for six years while in congress is well known; Elverson R. Chapman, of the firm of Moore & Sarley, bankers of Wall street and Broadway, and Mr. Isaac Dahman of this city as executive committee of the Dahlman dressed beef company, grand results can surely be expected and a permanent cattle market established here that cannot be removed by any agencies whatever.

Dehorning.

The different legal decisions on the subject of the cruelty of dehorning cows, in Great Britain, have been largely based on the temperaments of the people in the different localities. The sentimental, sympathetic Irish have opposed the practice, while the more practical, matter-of-fact Scotch have favored it. In the latest decision the judge ruled as follows: "We consider that the advantages attainable by the operation of de-

A VETERAN.

I was wounded in the leg at the battle of Stone River, Dec. 31st, 1862. My blood was poisoned from the effects of the wound, and the leg swelled to double its natural size, and remained so for many years. The poison did not get out of my system, and I suffered a thousand deaths. Nothing did me any good until I took Swift's Specific, which took the poison out of my system, and enabled me to feel myself a man again. S. S. S. is the remedy for blood poison.

horns are out of proportion to the pain suffered by the animal. We find as a matter of fact that in this case the operation was performed with reasonable skill and care, causing at the same time a certain degree of pain for an adequate and reasonable object not otherwise obtainable. We consider that the defense of justification set up should prevail."

Shipments Stacking Up.

Capt. S. B. Burnett of the 6606 ranch is in the city and will remain here several days. "There is nothing to call me to the ranch just now," he said, "as we are not shipping any cattle at present, nor will we for some time. Our cattle in the Territory have good grass and plenty of water, and as we are allowed until December 1 to get them out, we will let them eat the grass and take on flesh a week longer before moving them. Yes, we will have the pastures cleared by the appointed time. Some of the cattle will go to the markets and others will be brought to Fort Worth, Texas. I have, or rather will have, lots of cattle, fat and fine, which I can furnish the Fort Worth refrigerator when it starts up, and there are other cattlemen in my section in the same fix. There will be no trouble in getting all the cattle the contract of the refrigerator men calls for. Shipments from Texas are stacking up just now, and it is a wise thing in stockmen who have caused it."

Mutton Sheep.

Mr. Frank Willard is of the opinion that the gerrino makes as fine mutton as any of the other breeds of sheep, but Mr. Harker of Utah thinks differently. This is what he says on the subject. "A merino sheep is a fine wool sheep, but it is not a fine mutton sheep. You may cross the Cotswold ewe with the French merino buck and you improve the mutton of the merino; but if you want to have a finely flavored and a tender mutton you will have to go to the Downes. There is the Southdown, the Oxford and the Hampshire downs and the Shropshire; these are all fine sheep with a fine class of wool."

Ranch Sale.
Charles B. Metcalfe and Michael Dowling have bought a half interest in the X Z brand of cattle and horses, 3000 and 200 head respectively, from J. B. Russell & Co., and sold to the latter a half interest in 300 head of horses. Together, both transactions amount to about $40,000.—[San Angelo Standard.]

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd of Groton, S. D. we quote: "We have a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, coughed at and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors failed to cure me, but I was saved by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it trial, took in all about a bottle, and my husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman. Trial bottles free at Dr. E. Grammer's Drug Store; regular size, 50c, and $1."

GOODS IN BOND.

The Time for their Withdrawal will be Extended to Prevent Further Stringency in the Money Market.

CRESSON SPRINGS, Pa., Sept. 14.—It is understood that the president has been in communication with Representative McKinley and other leading Republican members of congress for several days past in regard to the treatment of goods in bonded warehouses under the new tariff bill with a view to the prevention of further stringency in the money market, and that an agreement has been reached whereby the time for the withdrawal of goods imported prior to the date on which the law goes into effect will be extended until February 1.

While the president will not admit that such is his intention, it is regarded here as practically settled that he will return to Washington next Saturday. The session ends on that day with the closing of the Mountain house. During the coming week the president and family will visit Johnstown, Sells Gap, Rhododendron park and one or two other points of interest in this vicinity. On their trip they will be the guests of the Pennsylvania railroad company with Mr. G. W. Boyd, assistant general passenger agent, as its representative.
